Darned right I do!

Ages weren't given, but it's obvious that the bride, Reba Ogles, and the groom, J. Harvey DeRosier, are living proof of that old cliché, "You're as young as you feel." The pair were married earlier this month at Romulus Senior Towers, where both lived, by Mayor Beverly McAnally. The banquet room was packed as a friend of the couple, Shirley Wilson, also a resident at the Towers, provided the music via her harmonica. Also pictured are Best Man Hubert Gilbert, who seems to be enjoying the ceremonial kiss nearly as much as the groom, and (far right) Margaret Gilbert, the Matron of Honor.

Judge's ruling clears way for temporary sales stands

A Wayne County Circuit Court Judge has issued a seven-day restraining order preventing Romulus officials from enforcing the new fireworks ordinance, which was passed at a May 29 council meeting.

The new ordinance banned the selling of fireworks from temporary stands, limiting the business to established buildings. Thursday, Judge Robert Columbo Jr. issued the restraining order, which covers only two local businessmen, Donald Kehn and Donald Lynn, who took the matter to the courts.

"It's good news and bad news for me," said Kehn. "The good news is we got the restraining order; the bad news is it's only for one week." Judge Columbo will make another ruling Friday.

"What it comes down to is this," said Kehn, "we have to come in and make our case as to why temporary stands should be allowed, to show that they are no more unsafe than permanent structures through which fireworks are sold.

"At that point, Judge Columbo will either decide to dissolve the restraining order or keep it in effect until our full-fledged trial date, which is two-and-a-half years away. If we can show the judge that our case has merit — that it will stand a chance in court — then we should be OK.

"If this were a football game, we'd be going into the fourth quarter trying to stop them from crossing the goal line."

— Councilman Barry Baumann

And I'm very confident we will do that," said Kehn.

Neither Kehn nor Romulus City Attorney Ronald Mack were willing to give away the strategy they will be using Friday, but both claimed to be hopeful of victory.

Councilman Barry Baumann, who spearheaded the drive to change the ordinance, claims the move is a positive step in cleaning up the image Romulus currently has as the "Fireworks capital of Michigan," a place where illegal fireworks are "as common and as easy to buy as bubblegum."

"I'm sure we'll come out of this victorious," said Baumann, adding that "at least I hope so for the safety of our children."

Under Michigan State law, illegal fireworks include any that leave the ground, such as bottle rockets and roman candles, and any that retort, or bang, such as firecrackers.

Kehn contends that he has "already lost over half of the selling season, and the delays are very hard, because if I order my stocks now, I may not be able to sell them (depending upon the court's decision) and if I wait I won't be able to get any from the suppliers."

Kehn said he expected to be selling fireworks as early as today (Wednesday).

"I look at it like this," Baumann said, "we won the first two rounds in court, he (Kehn) won this one. If this were a football game, we'd be going into the fourth quarter trying to stop them from crossing the goal line."

Police extradite suspect from Florida

A 23-year-old New Boston man, sought in relation to the brutal beating last year of a 43-year-old man in New Boston, was brought back to Romulus from Ft. Myers, Florida, last week by means of extradition.

Allen R. Morris had disappeared from the area, while awaiting trial last year on charges of armed robbery and assault with intent to commit murder. His alleged accomplice, Michael Takacs, also of the New Boston area, plead guilty last year to a plea bargain of unarmed robbery. He is currently serving 1½ to 7 years.

Morris was picked up on May 29 after a lien check showed he was wanted in Michigan. He had been stopped on a routine traffic check, according to Romulus Det. Sgt. David Early, who, along with Det. Sam Chalmers, flew to Florida to bring in Morris.

"We knew he was in Florida, but we couldn't prove it," said Early, "and with a federal flight warrant, you have to know exactly where they are."

Morris is currently being held on a $25,000 cash bond. His preliminary hearing is set for today.

The charges stem from an incident last year in which Takacs and, allegedly, Morris, met a man in a New Boston bar and were in a car with him. They stopped under the pretext of going to the bathroom.

According to Early, the man was struck from behind with a pool ball, robbed, and left for dead. The man managed to crawl to a house and have the police called. He required over 100 stitches, but recovered.

In other police news, Maurice Pressley, 19, of Inkster, was found guilty last week in a jury trial of armed robbery, felony with a firearm and receiving and concealing stolen property over $100.

The incident occurred in February of this year, when Pressley and a 17-year-old, Ivano Davis, allegedly held up a Romulus gas station. Davis pleaded guilty in juvenile court to sidetrack police efforts to have him tried as an adult, Early said.

A Romulus policeman, David Denno, was injured when he was pinned between two vehicles by Pressley's car, according to reports. Denno then fired at the car as it sped away, injuring Pressley.

Sentencing is scheduled for Thursday.

"This was Nezula's first promotional shot. She was 7 years old, and her grandmother wanted to kill me when she saw it!" — Gwen Sibert

She sets sights on show business

By STEVE O'LEARY
ANP Staff Writer

If 9½-year-old Nezula Sibert has her way, she'll be in show business for a long, long time.

"I want to have a show on television someday where I can have all different kinds of people on and talk to them. Like Michael Jackson, I could interview him ... when he's older, that is."

Nezula and her 7-year-old brother Calvin are Romulus' resident models, having appeared together and separately on television commercials and in ads for companies such as General Motors and Hudson's. "But mostly," they contend, they appear on television with their mom, Gwen, on her weekly cooking show.

Every Tuesday at 9 a.m. on Channel 62's "Morning Report," Sibert presents a 10-minute segment titled "The Healthy Cook," which features her showing techniques for cooking nutritiously, sharing recipes and interviewing health food celebrities. During the summer months, Mom is joined on the show by her kids and often, their friends from St. Aloysius School, where both are students.

"When the kids come on, the name of the show is changed to 'The Little Healthy Cooks and their Little Friends,'" says an obviously delighted Sibert, who relishes the chance to get more children on the show because it will "be such a thrill for them."

"I just love kids and love being around them," said Sibert, "maybe partly because I didn't have much of a childhood myself." At the age of 18 months, Sibert developed polio and for 10 years lived with a paralyzed left side.

Post Office named after Carl Morris

Chairman William D. Ford of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee reported Monday that the House of Representatives passed legislation designating the U.S. Post Office Building in Romulus as the Carl W. Morris Post Office Building.

"I'm extremely pleased that my colleagues in the House unanimously voted to honor the memory of Mr. Morris, who devoted so much of his life to the service of his community," said Ford. "Mr. Morris' life was dedicated to improving Wayne County and Michigan, especially in the field of education."

An oil company executive who died in 1982, Morris was president of the Wayne Intermediate School Board and the Michigan Association of School Boards. He was involved in the work of improving education in Michigan from 1947, when he was first elected to the Romulus Board of Education, until his death.

Morris also represented Romulus on the Peoples Community Hospital Authority board and was director of the Wayne County 4-H Association.

"He is truly a man who deserves to be remembered," Ford said.

Help from 'friends'

Dave Brunette (center) shares problems with others at a meeting of the newly formed medical-retired support group in Westland.

Medical retirees find support

By ROSE MARY REIZ
ANP Staff Writer

Dave Brunette begins his day by taking 20 prescribed pills. He watches his wife go to work, worries about how he'll support his three children and, when he feels well enough, wishes there was something better to do. Or at least someone to talk to.

A truck mechanic for 19 years, Brunette, now 47, developed heart problems in 1980. A second serious heart attack forced him into an early retirement the following year.

What followed was a change of lifestyle so drastic that each

"You feel you're taking up space — you're a burden. You start to ask yourself, 'Would I be better off, would my family be better off, if I weren't here?'" with Brunette, who began to suspect that the isolation he experienced might be very widespread.

"I know there are support groups in major hospitals for heart patients," Brunette says, "but some of us can't drive very far, and we never know how we're going to feel a half hour from now. What we really need is a place close to home to go to where we could vent our feelings and share some successes — just a little room somewhere with some chairs and a coffee pot."

With the help of Westland City Council member Bob Wagner, PCHA Chief Administrator John Freysinger and Health Education Director Mary Anne Homann, Brunette did even better.

Last month, room 2 of the walk outside to pick up the paper."

Max drove a tractor trailer for 17 years before exposure to toxic chemicals damaged his lungs. He is now retired with four children still at home.

"The state doesn't care, Workman's Comp doesn't care," Max says. "Sometimes it's hard not to take it all out on your wife and family and friends. You just have too much time to think."

"You get so tired of not belonging anywhere," Brunette adds. "You lose neighbors and friends — some act as if you've got the plague. With most, though, it's just that you no longer have things in common."

Something each retiree has ex-event assumed a "before or after heart attack" proportion.

"When a medical problem forces you into retirement, there are a whole spectrum of other problems," Brunette explains. "Your activity is limited, your financial situation changes drastically. You have problems with employers, the Social Security system and insurance companies. Things keep building until you don't feel like a whole person anymore. The medical problems become secondary."

Too young to be eligible for senior citizen programs, Brunette found himself, on good days, taking short walks to neighborhood restaurants "for a cup of coffee and just to break the monotony of the day."

Mirrored in the formica counters there Brunette found the faces of other misplaced wanderers, each struggling with similar pain.

"After 17 years of work, it's awful hard to tell yourself, 'This is it. You always have in the back of your mind that you'll get better and go back to work again.'"

Understanding glances inevitably led to conversation.

"About the only thing that helps, you're really low, is to talk to someone who's going through a similar problem, someone who understands," Brunette says.

A story about a heart attack victim which appeared in an April issue of the Eagle hit home

Westland PCHA Administration Building was reserved for the first meeting of a local support group for medically retired men.

The group which assembled was small, reluctant and skeptical at first. But as halting painful biographies were met with knowing nods, a sense of comradeship formed.

Children share Mom's interest in 'stardom' undergoing surgery and rehabilitation over that period. It is not noticeable today.

"It was while carrying Nezula, my daughter, that it was discovered I had a lump in my breast," explained Sibert. "Doctors wanted to do surgery, but I said 'wait a minute here,' and thought about it."

"I went to Dr. Ferdinand Penn, an M.D. who owns a health food store in Highland Park, and he told me that most of my problems were related to my eating habits. He said that because of my childhood illness, my system had trouble breaking down red meats. So, I became a vegetarian and have been healthy ever since."

Sibert hopes that her stint on Channel 62 will grow, with her goal being a "kid show" of her own.

"I'd make a fun environment for learning about good nutrition, with things like 'healthy clowns' and such, because the youngsters of today are tomorrow's decision-makers, and if they learn good eating habits now, they will stay with them when they grow up."

A staunch advocate of the "healthy mind means a healthy body" cliché, Sibert said it would help them to make "clearer decisions."

Talking to the children, one quickly becomes aware that both are extremely bright and affable. Although Calvin says that he would rather be an "airplane pilot" than a television star, it came out that last week he complained to mom that his sister was getting more "air" time than he was.

Calvin, who, like his sister, has never eaten a hot dog or hamburger, is also a blue belt in karate.

"Over Easter vacation he was in a tournament, said mom, "and he beat the youngster he was competing against. When the other boy started crying, Calvin went over and put his arm around him to make sure he was OK, a gesture which was not appreciated by the youth."

When asked if his television status has made him a celebrity around the corridors of St. Aloysius, Calvin humbly remarks "well, some people say I am."

Nezula first voiced her wishes to be a model after seeing a commercial on television, which showed a little girl spreading peanut butter on a piece of bread.

"She said 'Mommy, I can do that! Get me into that!' and she was hired after her first audition."

For a Chevrolet ad, running this month in several national magazines, both children are featured. But there is a side you wouldn't guess to modeling, a perilous dark side. For instance, Gwen Sibert laughingly says that during the shooting of the ad, she noticed Calvin smiling brightly, but Nezula with a rather strained smile.

Gwen, Calvin and Nezula Sibert work together to prepare a vegetarian meal for a television audience.

"It was because the whole time they were taking pictures, Calvin was pinching me," said a rather embarrassed Nezula. "It hurt!" But, like a real trooper, "She grinned through the pain because even at her age, she seems to know that the show must go on," her mom says. Show biz clichés abound around this family!

Besides her television show, Sibert is busy writing a book and working on a radio show, which will be airing soon. In addition, Nezula will be riding in a float in the Romulus Fourth of July Parade, as the winner of the "Little Tri-County Model" contest.

"I just like talking and getting pleasant things across, because most of what you hear is so bad," said Sibert. "I just want to bring some peace and love to kids, that's all."

defines success in terms of paycheck size.
"I didn't realize how hard women have it," Brunette confides. "Before this, I thought, 'Hey, that would be great-sitting at home all day.' But when the tables are turned ...
"You can only make so many beds, vacuum so many floors wash so many kitchen tables and you're a dull boy."
"There's the practical side, too, because unfortunately, women still don't make the kind of money men do. And money is a big problem in all of this, especially when you still have kids to put through school."
Dr. Joseph Bono, a PCHA clinical psychologist, didn't have ready answers for Brunette or his friends.
"The depression I'm hearing you express can be as debilitating as the physical problems you're facing," he told the group.

"We've been forced into this role reversal with our wives — now I'm home doing the dishes and sweeping the floor and she's forced to work. She's bringing home the money — you wonder if what you're contributing is enough."
"What you value in terms of your manhood and self esteem has been stripped away — and while it's normal for you to feel that way, it's not inevitable. I don't think that because you are physically disabled that there's nothing you can do," Bono reflected. "Perhaps there is a world of ideas you haven't looked into yet."
Discovering parts of that world will be the focus of future meetings. For now, weekly sessions will be divided to address both social needs (talking to relieve feelings of isolation and rejection) and practical requirements (guest speakers addressing questions about medications, side effects, insurance, even car and home repairs).
Newcomers will play an important role in deciding the fate of the group.
"I know there are other medically retired men facing the same problems," Brunette says. "The trouble is getting them out. Some people are just sitting there thinking, 'What can a group like that do for me?' But we want people to feel welcome, no matter what area they're from or what their health problem is. We'll be here at 10 a.m. every Thursday with coffee and donuts."
"I was skeptical about coming too," Clarence adds. "But who knows? Maybe we can work something out. Maybe we can do something. It beats hiding in the house."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By John Brimble

Violets in your garden? Use the leaves—or even the flowers—in salad. They're full of vitamin C. (Harvest before you fertilize the lawn)
Canned soups can be the base of flavorful first courses. Saute fresh or canned mushrooms in butter with chopped scallions. Add 2 cans of tomato soup and 1 of consommé, plus 1/2 cup can of water. Toss in a handful of chopped parsley, and a pinch of crushed rosemary leaves for homemade flavor. Heat until you're hungry.
One cup of granulated sugar equals 2 cups of sifted powdered sugar, because of all the air in it.
Hint of curry powder takes tuna salad out of the ordinary. Add apples and nuts for extra taste and texture.
Here's a special treat with chicken or ham. Slice canned or fresh sweet potatoes (cook if fresh) and peel, core, and slice tart apples. Now arrange them in layers in a buttered casserole, sprinkling cinnamon, brown sugar, and dots of butter here and there. Top with strips of bacon and bake until apples are tender.

Van Buren, Plymouth-Canton won't take 'No' for an answer

Van Buren Township and Plymouth-Canton voters said "no" to their public schools when they defeated millage requests this month. But neither district is through trying, and evidence suggests that each might be edging nearer a "yes" vote in fall elections.

The 6.5-mill Van Buren proposal failed June 11 by 172 votes. Not exactly a paper thin margin of defeat, the vote does represent a switch from last fall, when almost 700 voters rejected an identical proposal.

In Plymouth, 2,722 voters rejected a 1.74 millage request, the first additional request made by the district in five years.

It's significant that Van Buren millage supporters put up possibly their most energetic campaign in six years. The part senior citizens played on behalf of the millage (former mayor Justin Emerson, 72, was a key supporter) is also significant.

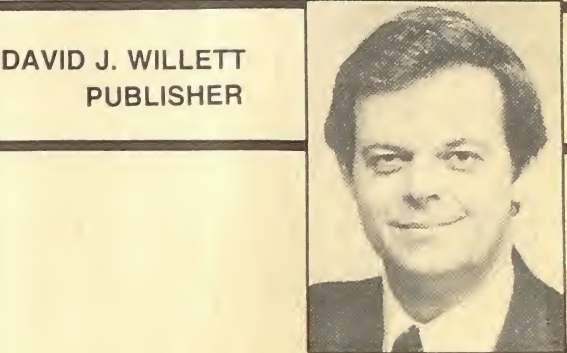

In Plymouth-Canton, school closings and enrollment declines also reflect an aging population. A recent school strike and the resignations of coaches and artfest organizers didn't do much to improve public relations in a district where "no" voters outnumbered their neighbors at the polls.

Approximately 17 percent of Van Buren's, and 10.72 percent of Plymouth-Canton's voters cast ballots — comparably respectable figures, but too low to suggest how the remaining percent of the electorate stand.

Both school boards soon will decide whether to hold another election this fall. We think that efforts to educate the public in both districts should be increased to help insure a "yes" answer.

Lastly, we question a system where the only opportunity tax-weary voters have to decide against additional spending also involves a vote against the future of their children's education.

Our newspaper has something that most of our competition does not — readers.

With all the attention focused on the importance of advertising in a newspaper in these recent columns, the importance of our readership cannot be minimized or forgotten. Without the news we'd have a "shopper."

Sophisticated advertisers, to be sure, buy the audience when they are sure people are reading and paying some attention to the content of any publication. The old "chicken and egg" phenomenon prevails, however, when editorial content is limited and advertising effects that limitation as it does in weekly newspapers. As previously mentioned, without the advertisers' support, there is a smaller paper and much less space for the editorial content ... and without a good editorial product, a newspaper cannot deliver the audience that an advertiser wants and needs.

Advertisers will often limit spending for publicity based on their perception of the success of the newspaper ... which they usually judge by the size. Advertisers often travel in hoards and ask the sales representatives, "What is everyone else in the shopping center doing?" or "Who else is in the paper?" Few wish to be perceived as doing anything at which their peers would cast a disapproving eye.

Innovators often want to be where others are but stand out with a striking, attention-compelling advertisement. Others want to be where their competitors are not. If it works, don't knock it.

Without consistent readers, advertisers must carry all the burden for revenue necessary to support the news department and operational functions of the newspaper. Therefore, circulation revenue from the sale of the paper is often a significant factor to all but the "free" publications.

Our news staff at Associated has been endeavoring to tailor an editorial product to fit the precise needs of each community that we serve. We have done nearly all that we can within the present economic framework of our company.

We have for years listened to those who question, however, why they have to purchase more than one of our newspapers to know "What's new." Often people comment that they live in one community and perhaps work in another and would prefer "one" publication. They demand to know what is going on in the community adjacent to them. Others prefer, strongly, the individual attention to only "their" community.

The plain truth is that it costs a great deal more to individualize the news product for each local community, both in the number of news pages devoted exclusively or predominantly to one area. We blend news germane to all, or a number, of our cities or towns in our coverage area. That costs more as well. We are trying to provide the best of both philosophies by providing exclusive front pages, and a blend of news inside the paper. It isn't easy.

We could fill our newspaper every week, five times over with the news releases that are mailed to us or brought into the office. The competition for editorial space in our paper is keen, to say the least. But our editorial department works to localize all our news content and to present to our readers page designs and layouts stimulating and effective.

We are well aware that the 35 cent coverprice or the $16 mail subscription is more costly than others. We know, too, that we are worth more based not only on our efforts, but on our performance.

Our staff cares and is working to give our readers the best product they can create.

We create virtually an entirely new product each and every week and while there certainly is plenty of room for criticism of what we can do and how we do it, we sincerely believe that with our resources, nobody could do it better.

We welcome your constructive suggestions for improvements, and if there is a feature story or an appropriate event that you would like to see us cover, drop Dennis Niemiec, our managing editor a note and tell him about it. He'll be glad to have your input.

You are the one thing that we have that others do not — and we do not underestimate you in any way. If you tell us what you want, we'll do our best to deliver.

See you next week.

Roosevelt Coats has had a few doors slammed in his face through the years. Nothing violent, mind you, just some vocal resistance to his message.

Rejection comes with the turf if you're lucky enough to be a life insurance salesman, a magazine pedler, a bill collector or any number of "bad news" bearers. Any person whose mere presence can turn a smile into a scowl must be prepared for the consequences.

Coats qualifies. He's a Jehovah's Witness. See what I mean? You're ready to turn the page. Scowling at that.

Some of us don't like to discuss religion in public. Makes us nervous. Jehovah's Witnesses, who take their beliefs to the pavement, make us nervous. Even angry sometimes.

Coats, an elder with the East Inkster congregation, isn't interested in winning any popularity contests, however. Ask him about adversity and he quotes from Matthew 24:14 (New World Translation): "This good news of the kingdom will be preached in all the inhabited earth for a witness to all the nations, and then the end will come."

"We're footstep followers of Jesus," explains Coats, an Inkster resident and successful new car salesman. "We ask people to study the bible (but) many don't want to learn from the bible. They don't want to stop living the way they're living."

Coats became a Jehovah's Witness in 1954 following a visit to his home. On June 21 thru 24 he'll join more than 40,000 persons at the Pontiac Silverdome for a district convention that is open to the public.

"Kingdom Increase" will be the theme of the program, a tribute to the growth of the Jehovah's Witnesses' movement in its centennial year celebration. Thanks to a tenacious band of evangelizers, the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses, based in New York, has experienced significant growth in recent years.

Praising Jehovah

More than 1 million followers are expected to attend conventions in 65 cities this year. Approximately 2.6 million Jehovah's Witnesses can be found worldwide in 205 lands with more than 100,000 members in Mexico, Brazil, Nigeria and West Germany.

Local membership also is on the upswing. Coats says, throughout Western Wayne County. A new congregation has recently formed in the area of Henry Ruff and Van Born and the East Inkster group, based at 3041 John Daly, boasts some 170 active members.

"This (Jehovah's Witnesses) is one of the fastest growing organizations on earth," claims Coats.

Obviously being "different" doesn't seem to bother Jehovah's Witnesses. In fact, they appear to delight in their disregard for conventional Christian teachings.

The movement was launched in the late 1870's by a small group of Bible students, led by Charles Taze Russel. In 1884 a corporation was formed to handle business affairs and printing activities. Eventually the organization became the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. The name, Jehovah's Witnesses, was decided upon at a convention in Columbus, Ohio in 1931 as a means of identifying the organization with God (Jehovah).

Controversy and Jehovah's Witnesses have been synonymous at times. Their belief in the principle of being "no part of the world, even as I am no part of the world," has created problems. Their views of complete neutrality — no participation in the political process — have resulted in 54 appearances before the U.S. Supreme Court in cases involving freedom of assembly, worship and public preaching.

Some of the door slammers would, I imagine, agree that the views of Jehovah's Witnesses are indeed out of this world. But whether or not one agrees with their beliefs, the conviction of those beliefs cannot be denied.

As they begin a second century in existence, the Jehovah's Witnesses show no signs of letting up on their commitment to public evangelism.

Yes, they march to the beat of a different drummer. And while I do not agree with many of their beliefs, I admire the fact that Jehovah's Witnesses are willing to "march."

Their commitment is refreshing.

Patterson is wrong

To the editor:

Once again L. Brooks Patterson is trying to force the death penalty on the people of Michigan. Using his usual propaganda, he is playing with the emotions of Michiganders in order to get others to back him.

In my opinion the facts speak plainly about capital punishment. This can be seen in Mr. Patterson's crusade by the fact that he uses no real facts. He tells us of "significant studies" proving that the death penalty is a deterrent, but he does not tell us whose studies he refers to.

If you doubt my word that crime rates prove that the death penalty is not a deterrent, prove it to yourself. Look up in any almanac the crime rates of the states, then compare the states with capital punishment to the states without it. Eighteen states have higher murder rates than Michigan. Only two of these 18 states don't have the death penalty. In the continental U.S. the statistics are clear about the death penalty. The average murder rate for states with capital punishment is 8.1 per 100,000 people. The average murder rate for states using no death penalty is 4.7 per 100,000. The statistics speak for themselves.

I believe that Mr. Patterson is too quick to call Detroit the murder capital. The study he refers to is one in a recent edition of the Detroit Free Press. This study was a survey of police chiefs, not an actual study by the FBI or any official organization on crime. According to a recent study by the FBI, many cities have higher murder and rape rates than Detroit. These cities are Odessa, TX; Miami, FL; Atlantic City, NJ; Las Vegas; Bakersfield, CA; Savannah, GA; New York City; Stockton, CA; Los Angeles and Dallas. All of these cities are in states with the death penalty.

If Mr. Patterson values life so highly, why does he insist on murdering more people? No one has been given the right to kill anyone including the government. The fact that 10 percent of those murdered by the state have been later found innocent scares the heck out of me. The death penalty has been used unfairly against the poor minorities in this country continuously, and there is no way this can be stopped.

I agree that violent crimes are horrible things and that we should do all we can to stop them. But the act of murdering murderers to prove murdering is wrong is only a hypocritical barbarous act itself.

Honor the flag

To the Editor:

Flag Day, June 14, marks the beginning of a 21-day Honor America celebration. Before reaching its climax on the Fourth of July, this special observance provides us with ample opportunity to honor our flag and nation as a free and independent people.

Because we are free and independent, it's important that we also take this time to reawaken the awareness that another important day looms before us this fall — Election Day, November 6. But, unfortunately, on Election Day, millions of Americans won't stand up to be counted. While it seems by news accounts and media coverage that the entire nation is caught up in the political hoopla of the nominating conventions and the elections themselves, the fact of the matter is that masses of citizens turn their backs on the election process and stay away from the polls. This display of indifference presents a challenge which must be dealt with.

According to the National Election Commission, only 54 percent of eligible voters cast their ballots in the 1980 presidential election. About 70 million eligible Americans did not vote. They chose, instead, to let someone else make their decisions for them — a choice that carries an impact on their lives for at least the following four years.

Even Michigan, with its proud tradition of citizen participation in the political-electoral process, had only 47.8 percent of its eligible voting age population turn out in the 1982 general election. This means that over three million eligible Michiganders did not invoke their privilege of voting.

The American Historic and Cultural Society has been pinpointing the span between Flag Day and Independence Day as a special 21-day period to honor America. What better way to honor our nation than to prepare ourselves to exercise our privilege of helping to elect our local, state and national leaders?

Eligible citizens can register to vote at the office of their city or township clerk, or at the time that a driver's license is renewed. Then, on November 6, we should exercise a most prized possession — the opportunity to vote for the candidates of our choice.

Fire education

To the Editor:

The Board of Trustees of the Wayne Westland Foundation for the Improvement of Instruction recently awarded a grant for the purpose of sustaining and improving Fire Awareness Education in our community.

The awarding of the grant is an indication that the personnel, both of the fire departments and of the school system, have done their work well. But more importantly, it is an indication that the concepts of fire safety are being taught to, and learned by, the students of the community.

On behalf of the Fire Department, I wish to publicly thank this organization for its support in our continuing effort to make hostile fire a socially unacceptable occurrence.

Winning essay . . . 'Statue of Liberty'

Craig Lowery

"The Statue of Liberty was conceived and designed as a symbol of a good international friendship. With the passing of the years, its significance has remained until today and it is the most symbolic structure in the United States."

— Craig Lowery

Craig Lowery of Westland is the winner of the sixth annual essay contest sponsored by the Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary, Unit 120.

A student at Marshall Junior High, Lowery submitted a piece on the Statue of Liberty and received the first prize of $25 for his efforts, according to Phyllis Holland of Belleville. Second-place honors went to Lorie Mashburn of Adams Junior High and third place was earned by Leslie Simon of Marshall.

Following is Lowery's winning essay:

The Statue of Liberty was conceived and designed as a symbol of a good international friendship. With the passing of the years, its significance has remained until today and it is the most symbolic structure in the United States.

The Statue of Liberty, one of the most colossal structures in the history of the world, stands in New York Harbor at the very portal of the New World. It has greeted many millions of the other lands who have crossed the ocean in search of greater freedom and opportunity. To the whole world, the Statue has become the symbol of those ideals of human liberty upon which our nation and its form of government were founded.

In its international aspect, the statue, which was a gift from the people of France to the people of the United States, commemorates the long friendship between the people of the two Nations. This is a friendship that has continued since the American Revolution when supported by the French with senews of war, it helped turn the tide of victory to the side of the colonies.

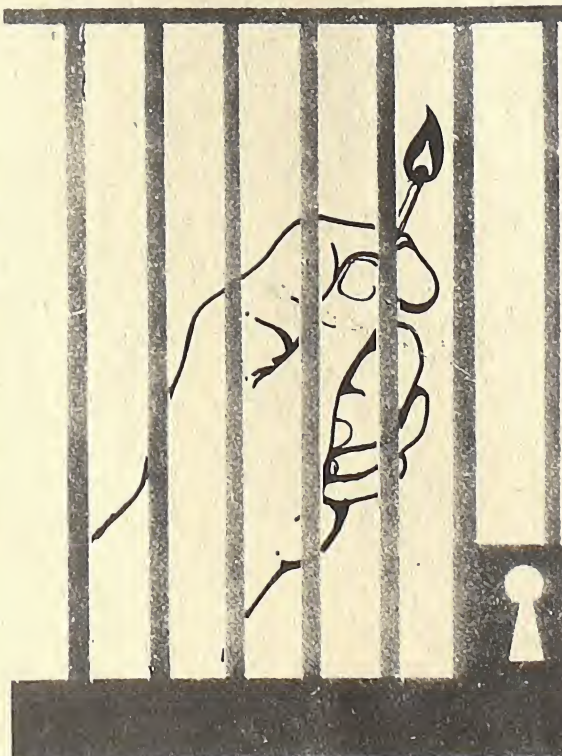

Then there is symbolism in the design of the States itself. The broken shackles of tyranny that are modeled at the feet of Liberty have spoken for themselves to generations of people feeling tyranny. The tablet in the Statue's left hand, inscribed July 4, 1776, refers to the Declaration of Independence, telling all of the American ideal that "all men are created equal." The torch, held high in her right hand, lights the way to freedom and liberty.

Edouard de Laboulaye did not live to see the work finished, and his place as president of the Frances-American Union was taken by Count Ferdinand de Lesseps, builder of the Suez Canal. Bartholdi was among those present to see President Grover Cleveland dedicate the Statue on October 28, 1886.

Lighting the gigantic structure to best advantage was a perplexing problem. The system of electric lights originally installed has been replaced several times by more modern equipment. The present improved system almost doubles the lighting of the previous installation. The torch itself is equipped with an especially brilliant illumination, which is equivalent to 2,000 times the effect of full moonlight.

Dad

*I know you're awfully busy Dad
But, there's things I wish you'd do.
It isn't that I'd ask for much
But just a thought or two.*

*Like, could you help me
with my home-work
Or spend an hour with me?
Like, tell me some nice story
Or hold me on your knee?*

*Perhaps we could go fishin'
Or to the party store.
I wouldn't ask for very much,
'Cause I know we're kinda' poor.*

*But, if you could spend some time with me,
I'd have so much to say.
To have you to myself sometimes
Means more to me than play.*

*I know you're busy most the day.
From sun-up 'til past five.
But think of all the fun we'd have
On just a little drive.*

*I guess the thing I'm trying to say
Is what will make me glad.
It's nothing that all wealth could buy.
Just, be a father to me Dad.*

200 Guests attend wedding of Spring Arthur to Thomas Jackson

The First United Methodist Church of Belleville was decorated with white lilies, potted white tulips and white hyacinths for the recent marriage of Spring Joy Arthur of Southfield and Thomas Kilmer Jackson of Belleville.

The bride is the daughter of Joy and Dorothy Arthur of Southfield, while the groom is the son of Robert and Antoinette Jackson of White Bear Lake, Minnesota.

More than 200 guests were in attendance for the late morning nuptials, officiated by the Rev. Joy E. Arthur and the Rev. Leland E. Penzion. Music included harp selections by Anita Leschied, "Whither Thou Goest" performed by Terry Solem, "The Lord's Prayer" sung by Kathy Rairick and "Trumpet Voluntary" with Steve Vecchi on trumpet.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother Stephen, chose an ivory tea length dress with a high neckline, long sleeves, lace bodice and full skirt. Her headpiece was a wreath of baby's breath, white roses and stephanotis with ivy accents.

She asked her best friend and college roommate, Molly Ann Wiarda of Jackson, to serve as her maid of honor. She wore a smoky blue, tea-length dress, with short sleeves, a gathered waist and full skirt. Her bouquet was of white daisies with yellow and white roses and baby's breath.

Her bridesmaids were high school friend Beverly May of Corvallis, Oregon, and the groom's sister, Elizabeth Jackson of Minneapolis, Minnesota. Their dresses matched those of the honor attendant's and they carried bouquets of white daisies, yellow roses and baby's breath.

The groom asked his brother David of Minneapolis to serve as his best man, while his groomsmen were Terry Solem, a high school friend from Chicago, Illinois, and Steve Vecchi, a college friend from Minneapolis. The ushers were Paul Smith of Belleville, a friend of the bride and groom, and Mark Rairick of Delaware, Ohio, a friend of the bride and groom, and Jim Plant, a college roommate from Duluth, Minnesota.

Mrs. Arthur chose a tea-length lavender dress for her daughter's wedding and wore a corsage of orchid and stephanotis. Mrs. Jackson wore a light blue tea-length dress and a similar corsage.

A reception for the newlyweds and 240 guests took place at The Ramada Inn in Romulus. The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the Jacksons, was held at the Holiday Inn, also in Romulus.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Cape Coral, Florida, for one week before moving into their new home in Belleville.

The new Mrs. Jackson attended Adrian College and Michigan State University, earning a bachelor of arts degree in education. She is employed by the Beverly Hills United Methodist Church in Beverly Hills, Michigan.

Her husband attended the University of Minnesota-Duluth, where he received a his bachelor of arts and associate's degrees in business. He is employed by the Stauffer Chemical Company in Westport, Connecticut.

The couple exchanged their wedding vows at the Romulus towers apartment complex before Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally. Music for the single-ring ceremony was provided by Shirley Wilson.

The bride chose a pink polyester suit with a white ruffled blouse for the afternoon ceremony. She also wore a corsage of white carnations.

She asked Margaret Gilbert of Romulus to serve as her matron

Greg's Emergency Room

New satellite brings sporting events

By DENNIS NIEMIEC
Managing Editor

Greg Reid isn't satisfied with offering a good burger, good fish and chips, good entertainment or good anything for that matter. He wants the BEST for his customers at Greg's Emergency Room Lounge, located at Palmer and Merriman across from the Wayne County General Hospital.

So it came as no surprise to find out that Reid has purchased one of the finest satellite dishes in the area to provide sports' programming for his patrons.

"The only people with a more powerful dish around are the cable companies themselves," says Reid. "Ours is 12 feet while most other dishes are 8 to 10 feet. The bottom line is a better reception and more stations."

Tiger baseball games and all major sporting events are telecast on a 7-foot screen. Greg's offers discounts on drinks to all softball players in uniform and on Tuesday nights from 7 to 11 o'clock visitors can order a hot dog for 25 cents and a pitcher of beer for $2.

Reid himself has gotten into the swing of things by sponsoring eight female softball teams and one male squad ("I discriminate against the guys," he laughs).

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights The Kickin' Country Band provides live entertainment. This dance band has played behind such well known acts as Johnny Lee, Ronnie Milsap and Tammy Wynette. Every Thursday is Ladies Night with a 2-for-1 price featured all night.

Greg's Emergency Room

'The only people with a more powerful dish around are the cable companies themselves.'

— Greg Reid

rates as more than just a night spot — its luncheon specials truly are "special." For 99 cents one can choose from two Coney Islands, fish sandwich, clam strips and wing dings. Soon a kielbasa sandwich will be added, again for 99 cents.

Reid's pride and joy, the ground round, is priced at $1.25 and for a ½ pound burger it does rate among the very best around. Other selections for $1.25 include a breaded chicken sandwich, breaded veal sandwich, hot ham sandwich and homemade chili.

An all-you-can-eat fish and chips meal is featured each Friday from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. The $3.25 dinner includes fresh cod, cole slaw, french fries, bread and butter. A fisherman's platter — cod, shrimp, scallops and clam strips — is priced at $3.95.

For information on the telecast of upcoming sporting events, contact the lounge at 595-4888. Happy Hour is set from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. week-days.

Ghostbusters

a spirited motion picture!

Ghostbusters A Columbia Pictures release. Produced and Directed by Ivan Reitman; Written by Dan Aykroyd and Harold Ramis; Director of Photography, Laszlo Kovacs; Music by Elmer Bernstein. Cast includes Bill Murray, Harold Ramis, Dan Aykroyd, Sigourney Weaver, Rick Moranis, Annie Potts and Ernie Hudson. Now playing at area theatres

By STEVE O'LEARY
ANP STAFF WRITER

"You don't act like a scientist... you act more like a game show host."
— Sigourney Weaver to Bill Murray
"Ghostbusters" is yet another of a rash of summer blockbuster movies released in the past few weeks, and, in its way, it's as good as any of them. "Its way," be informed, is FUNNY.

Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd and Harold Ramis costar in this story of paranormal — or ghostly — occurrences taking place in New York City. Having their college grant taken out from under them for their research, they decide to take their experience and become the first-ever team of "Ghostbusters."

"I loved college! They gave us money and facilities and we didn't have to do anything! You don't know what it's like — I've worked in the private sector! They expect results!"
— Dan Aykroyd

Drs. Venkman, Stantz and Spengler (Murray, Aykroyd and Ramis) have discovered a way not only to locate ghostly spirits, but also to capture them. Their first job is successful, and suddenly they're on the cover of Time, USA Today and Omni. They're on every television talk show in the country. They're a hit.

Murray, whose character is more interested in scoring with Dana Barrett (played by Sigourney Weaver of "Alien" fame) than in research, finally gets a date with her after she had hired him to investigate strange goings-on inside her apartment (eggs pop out of their shells and fry on the countertop, she opens her fridge and instead of cold pizza and diet Coke there's a fire-engulfed castle mumuring "Zwool").

Unfortunately, when Murray arrives for the big event, he finds a different person — she's been possessed. Instead of the innocent young woman he expected, he comes face to face with a burning, sensual temptress, seething and panting as desire envelopes her thrusting... OK. Back to the movie.

"Wait. I have a rule never to get involved with a possessed person."
"I want you. Now."
"Actually it's more of a guideline than a rule"

— Bill Murray and Sigourney Weaver

Rick Moranis (of SCTV's Bob and Doug McKenzie skits) plays a fantastic nerd of a neighbor, living just down the hall from Weaver on the 23rd floor of an apartment building. Every shirt the guy wears looks like a pajama top, and he can't walk out into the hall without locking himself out of his apartment. He even locks himself out of his own party ("It's a great party! And after a while we're going to play Twister!")

A jerk from the Environmental Protection Agency (it could be a relative of Rita Levell's...) ends up releasing the ghosts and New York is in havoc. No, that's wrong. Havoc is in New Jersey.

Anyway, the story unfolds with great twists and turns which shall remain unrevealed here (unless, of course, money is offered). The special effects are fantastic, absolutely amazing. For instance, there's a green ghost who looks like a cross between Pac-Man and Jabba the Hut who eats leftovers off Hotel and guzzles Budweiser. Or the wooden plank that oozes slime.

"Ectoplasmic residue! The real thing! Get a sample of that!"

"Somebody blows their nose and you want to keep it!"

— Aykroyd and Murray

Originally, the screenplay — excellently written by Ramis and Aykroyd — was done with the late exploited John Belushi in mind for the lead role. It's hard though, to think that even the addition of someone as funny as Belushi could improve on this cast.

They mesh perfectly, and as a result this film is warm, funny, scary and ever exciting — all without sinking to degrading the human condition with extremes of foul language and sex. But I guess you can't have everything...

'Naughty Anthony' tackles plenty of modern problems

For those who long to escape the "anything goes" present, back to a time when high moral standards were cherished, "Naughty Anthony" may come as a bit of a surprise.

This Gay Nineties comedy, presented at Henry Ford Museum Theater in Dearborn through July 21, is anything but tame. Although written by theater great David Belasco nearly 100 years ago, the play tackles such modern problems as extra-marital dalliances, crimes of passion, bribery and growing up chaste in an unchaste world.

The setting is Chautauqua, New York, "the only moral town in the United States." Helping to maintain that image is Professor Anthony DePew, who diligently instructs the ladies of the town in matters of moral culture.

At the first signs of temptation, (which seems to occur often in Chautauqua) troubled women flock to Professor DePew's home, paying handsomely for his guidance and a never-ending list of books he has authored.

Although occasionally tempted to transgress himself, the Professor's downfall is the alluring Miss Cora. A young hosiery model who "can fill up a stocking like Santa Claus," Cora has set her sights not on salvation, but on captivating the handsome professor with her charms. This she accomplishes at a late-night "lesson" in the city park.

The couple's somewhat noisy tryst in the summerhouse is discovered by the park policeman, who immediately collars DePew while Cora flees. When asked to identify himself, the panicked Professor offers the first name he can think of — his happily married landlord, Mr. Budd — thereby beginning a chain of mistaken identities that thoroughly befuddles the characters and amuses the audience.

"Naughty Anthony" is classic farce, replete with sight gags, double entendres and asides to the audience. It also serves as a light-hearted reminder that the current "anything goes" generation is not all that different from their grandparents in matters of the heart.

Local Scouts launch space patch

"Girl Scouts wish for peace around the world" reads a Huron Valley Girl Scout Council patch that will make a real trip around the world, several times, on a Space Shuttle Challenger, launched on June 20.

The patch and its message were the idea of Girl Scout Troop Leader Verna George and her Brownie Girl Scout Troop 326, Canton. They wanted to offer a special welcome to the delegates from more than 100 nations who will be attending the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts (WAGGGS) Conference in New York this July.

"My Brownies, who are 6 and 7 years old, have made wishes for the future, among them that there will always be peace and there will be no wars," wrote Mrs. George in her initial letter to NASA. "We feel this patch making a trip 'around the world' aboard our own space shuttle would add significance in the presentation to the conference."

Six patches will be aboard Challenger. They will be presented to the Chief of WAGGGS; Jane Freeman, GSUSA President; Senator Carl Levin, who helped in contacting NASA; Verna George and Troop 326; Huron Valley Girl Scout Council Office; Pat Levos, Livonia, Council President. Copies of the patches will be presented to each of the 450 delegates attending WAGGGS Conference.

Mrs. George had two reasons for wanting a Girl Scout patch on the space shuttle.

"For our children, the shuttle launches are 'old hat,'" said Mrs. George. "I want them to get interested. At least they will watch this launch because it carries their message of peace."

"I am almost more excited, though, that the patch will be presented to WAGGGS delegates," she added. "Our children are frightened of the future, of bombs and war. With this patch, WAGGGS Conference participants will pass along to their countries, our children's message of peace."

For City Championships

Golf tourney deadline is set

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

If you are planning to compete in the 25th annual City Championship Golf Tournament don't wait until the last minute to mail in your registration form.

That's the word from Bill Hawley, tourney director for the Associated Newspapers' "Silver Anniversary" event.

"This year we expect 150 golfers to compete in this tournament," Hawley noted, "and, as in the case of the past tournaments, some of the golfers wait until the last minute before they sign up.

"Because the golf course has other commitments, especially to its members, officials are urging us to get in the numbers so that they can reserve our tee off times. I know that our area golfers will abide by their wishes."

The tournament will be staged during the weekend of July 21-22 at Dun Rovin Golf Course in Plymouth. The 6,750-yard, par 72 layout was the site of the ANP's 1979 competitions.

The tournament is open to amateur male golfers who reside or work in the cities of Wayne, Westland, Inkster, Romulus and Garden City and also in the Township of Canton. The competition is designed to determine the city championships simultaneously of the participating communities.

The top five finishers in each of the championship flights will be eligible to represent their city (or township) at the state parks and recreation tournament usually conducted in the month of September. All other golfers will become alternates for the city team in order of their finish.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in each of the flight. Additional flights will be organized only if the total number of entries from one city warrants it, and in case of a tie for one of the trophies, a sudden death playoff will be conducted to determine the eventual winner.

There is a $30 entry fee which will cover the two-day green's and trophy fees. (The ANP regrets it can't refund any entry fees after the first day of competition.)

In addition to the trophies, there will be awarded a championship trophy to the low scorer (medalist) for the entire tournament.

Grand Prix III

Can U.S. cars run with best from Japan, Europe?

Driving both a Pontiac Fiero in the June 23 SCAA Trans-Am Race, and a Ford Escort in the June 24 Chrysler Corp/Spark Plug Challenge Race, should provide quite a challenge to Detroit's own Leavy Morgan.

At 32, Morgan, the only Detroit driver, is one of two black professional race car drivers scheduled to compete in Detroit's Grand Prix III. He was born, raised and still lives on Detroit's west side.

Although both races are open to a large number of different domestic and foreign vehicles, Morgan says he chose the Fiero and Escort to prove that American cars can run with the best from Europe and Japan.

"I just couldn't see driving an import in a Detroit race," he said. "Besides, I have a lot of friends who build both General Motors and Ford automobiles."

Leavy, who raced his Super Vee in the SCCA Bosh-VW Gold Cup Race during Detroit's first Grand Prix and his Ford Escort in last year's Grand Prix II IMSA RS Champion Spark Plug Challenge Race, is being sponsored by numerous local businesses including the Coca-Cola Bottlers of Detroit and Conyers/Riverside Ford.

Morgan began his motor racing career while serving in the US Army in Germany. Entering the Hockenheim Formula Ford Club Championship in 1977, he compiled an impressive record of 10 victories in 12 starts.

After being discharged in 1978, he competed in the Showroom Stock Sedan "A" Races at Waterford Hills, Michigan. He then turned professional and competed in numerous races before entering Detroit's Grand Prix I in 1982.

This year's race will put a great deal of pressure on Morgan. In addition to the stiff competition from numerous outstanding drivers, he will have his hands full driving cars in two different races. However, the owner of 'Spirit of Detroit Motorsport' is not too concerned.

"Although the competition will be extremely tough," he said, "I actually have a distinct advantage over the other drivers, because I drove the course in both the 1982 and 1983 Grand Prix events. Only the returning Formula One drivers will have had more time on this track," he said.

An interesting sidelight tied in with his racing activities, is Leavy's sponsorship of an educational apprenticeship program in advanced automotive technology for selected inner-city youth, in cooperation with Detroit's

Vocational Education Centers. Two of the program participants are working with him preparing the cars for the race, and will serve as members of his pit crew during the Grand Prix weekend.

Hasn't Thomas Hearn proved, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that he is the best boxer in the world?

The TKO of Roberto Duran in the 2nd round last Saturday made a believer out of me. I also think Duran should retire. He has to be much older than he says ... 32? Hogwash! Once a quality fighter, he now has lost his skills and should bow out now.

Next up: Hearn vs. Marvin Hagler, who has also slipped. And speaking of the fights, Saturday nite, didn't Alvin "Too Sweet" Hayes look like something the cat dragged out when he stepped in the ring wearing a pink mask, pink bow tie, etc? His opponent, Jimmy Paul, gave Hayes what he deserved, a knockout, in the battle between the two Detroiters.

The Detroit Tigers are showing the baseball world that they are, indeed, the best team in the Major Leagues. June was supposed to be the month the Detroiters would slip because of the quality teams they played, but that just concluded 7-3 record on the road showed otherwise.

I thought it was bush the way Mario Lemieux acted at the N.H.L. draft after Pittsburgh chose him No. 1. He refused to get out of his seat and go to the Penguin table. Maybe it was because his agent, Gus Badali, told him. If that's the case it's typical. Agents are giving their clients bad advise, for the most part. And Badali, from what I understand, is a real beaut. By the way, I thought the media unfairly criticized Livonia's Al Iafate's attitude before the draft. Here's a shy 18-year-old kid who I have gotten to know quite well the last few weeks. He's a good guy. Toronto picked Iafate in the first-round (fourth choice overall). The Leafs have had a lot of turmoil lately, but maybe that will change with naming of ex-Red Wing Dan Maloney as coach. He is a no nonsense-type of person and if they give him control, which is unlikely, Maloney just might get the Leafs back on track. Speaking of the draft, it appears the Red Wings did well again. Coming up with Steve Yzerman and Lane Lambert in last year's draft was a real coupe, and most people like their first choice this year, Shawn Burr. He's an aggressive player, something the Wings need and he's good with the puck. Detroit also drafted four Swedes and a couple of them could make this team. 31-year-old Milan Chapula is in for sure. But it will be tougher for the Wings to make the playoffs this season. Last year they made it because the division was so bad. Chicago had a lot of injuries. Look for that team to bound back. St. Louis, not knowing if they were staying or moving to Saskatoon or even playing for that matter, will be better. Minnesota has to be better. And Toronto, well, who knows?

Who said Hearn wasn't for real?

Next week we'll talk about the N.B.A. draft and zero in on the Pistons.

EMU to host ball clinics

Eastern Michigan University head baseball coach Ron Oestrike and EMU assistant coach Roger Coryett will host a summer baseball clinic for ball players, ages 9 through 16 during the month of June and until July 5.

Softball is king

Softball has taken over as the No. 1 summer time recreation sport in the area as hundreds of teams and players flock to local diamonds to participate in municipal and township leagues. Action, like that captured in the photo above where Quality Printers' slugger, Terry Allen, blasts away may be viewed daily on diamonds in Romulus, Inkster, Canton, Wayne, Van Buren, Westland and Belleville. Recreation officials also are urged to get score sheets to the Associated Newspapers' sports desk with all pertinent information, including the first and last names of ball players, scores and standings in order that the ANP staff may cover league competition.

fifth to knot the score at 4-all. That run was produced on a pair of errors that put Tina Cicotte and Sumner aboard and Michele LaMance's run-scoring single.

Neither team could break the deadlock in regulation play, so they went into extra innings.

In the top of the eighth, Belleville struck again. Carol Wisniewski was safe on an error and, with one-away, Pence walked.

Cicotte then was safe on an error, loading the bases. Sumner belted one to short but Pence was called for interference, leading to the second out. LaMance came through with a single, chasing in the tie-breaker and go-ahead runs and, when Lori Shreckengost stroked an infield dribbler which was booted, the Tigers scored what proved to be the final Tiger run of the game. Sumner is tossed out attempting to steal for the final Tiger out.

Young athletes make history

In the bottom of the eighth, Wisniewski started the inning by issuing Salinas a base on balls. She then gave up a single to Chris Silver and Carol Maida singled, scoring one run. However, Silver was tossed out trying to stretch it to third. After a second out, Wisniewski gets the final out by getting Sharon Maida to fly out to Melissa Stafford.

It's never too late to honor a group of young athletes who recently made history for Inkster at the Special Olympics held in Plymouth last month.

Representing Inkster which was making its inaugural appearance at the Special Olympics were Ardise Mitchell, Ulysses Roberson, Hadley Hasley.

Inkster athletes competed in nine events and came away with eight medals. Three of the gold medals went to Mitchell who competed in the boys 14-15 year old age group. He captured first places in the 200 meter run, the long jump, and the softball distance throw.

Roberson picked up a pair of gold medals and a silver, also in the same age group, as he finished first in the 50-meter dash and the frisbee throw but was runner-up in the long jump.

Hadley won a pair of bronze medals in the 12-13 age group for his performances in the 50-meter and the softball throw.

American, All-Catholic. He'll continue his athletic career at Howard University where he was awarded a four-year scholarship which is worth approximately $40,000.

According to University of Detroit Jesuit High School Coach, Jerry Myszkowski, Eric is the most promising shot put competitor he has coached in the last ten years.

Eric's father,

James C. Moore, is director of Special Services at Wayne State University and his mother, Dorothy, is a counselor for Detroit Public Schools.

Kindinger addresses Rotary

Dr. Paul Kindinger, Director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture, recently spoke to the Belleville Rotary Club on "Agriculture — The Common Bond." Agriculture is the largest, most efficient, most international business in the United States today, according to Kindinger. Twenty-three percent or two million jobs are related to agriculture and span from the farm level to the sale of food items. Michigan's Gross National Product derives 20 percent of its total from the agricultural industry, Kindinger said. An example of its efficiency is that in 1960, one farm fed 28 people, compared to 1982 when each farmer fed 70 people. They also provide 25 percent of the world's food supply.

Dr. Kindinger feels that "agriculture is at a crossroads today." In order to preserve its efficiency and its place in the international market, three key items must be addressed: The soil must be protected against erosion. A comprehensive water plan must be developed or the water resources of Michigan will be diverted to other areas of the country. New markets for Michigan's agricultural products must be created. Dr. Kindinger will be accompanying Gov. James Blanchard to China this summer to promote Michigan's agricultural industry. Approximately 60 people convened at Rotary's Annual Farmer's Night. Keith Bruder and Donald Juchartz organized the event. Jack Ferret is president of the local club.

The Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club (BPW) held their last dinner meeting, for the club year on June 4. The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the annual $500 scholarship to a Belleville High School senior girl. The recipient was Elizabeth A. Herring, who will be attending Michigan State University in the fall, and hopes to become a veterinarian. Also, a $50 contribution was made to Belleville High School student Sam Druker, who will be attending an invitational science seminar at Harvard University this summer. Recognition was given to Aldine Potter, who participated in the CROP Walk for world hunger, held on June 3. It was a 10-mile walk between St. Anthony's Church of Belleville and the United Methodist Church of Romulus. Miss Potter secured more than $125 in pledges. The event was significant for Miss Potter, because she is a senior citizen. Sharon Collins and Sophie Zoller also participated, and completed the walk. Both are BPW members. Members were encouraged to attend the "Learning to Lead" training session, held at the Ketunen Center, near Cadillac on June 15-16. The proposed 1984-85, Club Budget also was considered for adoption. Nashville, Tenn. will host the National BPW Convention July 22-26. Many Belleville members will be attending. Members also were asked to serve at least three hours in the BPW booth at the Strawberry Festival, June 22-24. Strawberry jewelry, balloons, paper napkins, magnets and many strawberry items will be for sale. Arrangements for the June meeting were made by the Scholarship Committee — Georgia district workshop in Ann Arbor on July 17. The following officers for the 1984-1986 terms were installed — president, Yvonne Harner; vice-president, Mary Clair Ellward; secretary, Wilma Petrasky; corresponding secretary, Ada Peets, and

Study Club holds annual dinner meeting

Heritage Hospital to expand mental health care unit

Groundbreaking ceremonies for a 30,000-square-foot mental health services addition to Heritage Hospital will be held at 3 p.m., Tuesday, June 12. The ceremony will mark the beginning of a $5.2 million, year-long construction project at the Taylor hospital.

Heritage is one of five acute-care community hospitals owned and operated by Peoples Community Hospital Authority (PCHA). The other units are Annapolis Hospital in Wayne, Beyer Memorial Hospital in Ypsilanti, Outer Drive Hospital in Lincoln Park and Seaway Hospital in Trenton.

The existing mental health unit at Heritage consists of 30 adult inpatient beds, the only mental health service in the authority at this time. The expansion project will add 39 beds and provide a new program of comprehensive outpatient mental health care. This new service will make it possible for the hospital to provide a continuum of care to patients who are discharged from the mental health unit.

As outpatients, they will visit the hospital for their scheduled therapy. One approach that will be utilized in the new program will be "Day treatment." Under this treatment plan, the patient will come in for several hours a day, up to five days a week, for intensive therapy, while adjusting to being out of the hospital, or as an alternative to being admitted to the hospital.

Other patients may be scheduled to come in for therapy once a week or on another regularly scheduled basis.

Both types of therapy can provide a link between the hospital and the home for people who have been inpatients on the mental health unit and have been discharged. However, it will not be necessary for a person to have been an inpatient in order to access the outpatient care. Patients can be self-referred, or referred by physicians or community agencies.

The expansion program will add a 3-floor wing to the hospital, as well as utilize renovated "shell space" within the hospital.

The new wing is scheduled to open in summer 1985. In the meantime, the existing unit will remain open and continue to operate during construction.

Babysitting class begins

Annapolis Hospital will offer a 2-part babysitting course for area young people interested in learning more about child care.

The course is designed by the American Red Cross, and participants will be awarded a Red Cross certificate in babysitting.

The 2-part sessions will be held on Tuesday, June 26, and Thursday, June 28, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. both days. Participants must be 11 years of age or older. A $5 material fee will be charged. To register for the course call 467-4570 by June 22.

Topics to be covered include babysitting responsibilities, growth and development of children, toys and games, supervising children, accident prevention and emergency procedures, and basic care and feeding of children.

Students will have the opportunity to gain factual knowledge and practice such skills as feeding and diapering an infant, simple first aid and ensuring the sitter's safety as well as the child's.

Classes will be held in Conference Room 2 of the PCHA Annex Building, 4420 Venoy

Road, located across from Annapolis Hospital.
